Dear Colleagues:

In response to your letter dated June 15, 2011 regarding your examination of my 2010 Financial Disclosure Statement, I would like to report the following information.

During our lifetimes, both my wife and I have worked for the State of Alabama (or its political subdivisions). The value of my spouse's Retirement Systems of Alabama ("RSA") retirement account was correctly reported for calendar year 2010 and inadvertently omitted from the 2009 report. Upon further examination and reflection prompted by your letter, I should add that my RSA retirement account "value" was also inadvertently omitted for both years.

These RSA accounts exist within the bowels of the State of Alabama's accounting system. I do not get monthly statements from the RSA for the "value" of these retirement accounts. I don't personally deposit money into or withdraw money from these RSA accounts. Hence, they were out of sight, out of mind, and inadvertently omitted. The correct "values" for my wife and me are:

	Value at 12/31	Income Received
RSA assets held by me
2009	$15,000-$50,000	None known
2010	$15,000-$50,000	None known
RSA assets held by my spouse
2009	$1,001-$15,000	None known
2010	$1,001-$15,000	None known

Sincerely,

Morris J. "Mo" Brooks
